Helping Households Connect: Affordable Connectivity Program

The FCC's new Affordable Connectivity Program (ACP) helps households afford the broadband services needed for work, school, healthcare, and more. It provides a discount of up to $30 per month toward internet service for eligible households, and up to $75 per month for households on qualifying Tribal lands.

The ACP offers more eligibility options than previous programs of this type.

To check eligibility and enroll, visit Sierra Tel's website or go directly to the Universal Service Administration Company's (USAC) website and complete an online or mail-in application.
